

SPIRIT RELEASE TRAINING TRAINING FOR HYPNOTHERAPIST

The notion that mental illness was caused by possessing spirits was a common belief before the emergence of the eighteenth-century 'Scientific Enlightenment'. Before that, the traditional remedy for mental sickness was a religious exorcism.

With the emergence of scientific rationalism, psychiatrists replaced exorcists, and notions of demons and spirit possession were relegated to the realms of superstition.

However, in the modern period, individual pioneers in psychotherapy and mental health often had cause to reconsider the possibility of the existence of spirits. Carl Jung was one of the twentieth century's pioneering psychologist practitioners of spirit release. He had once spent three days engaging in dialogue with spirits who inhabited his house and assisted them in moving on. Jung writes:

The souls of the dead 'know' only what they knew at the moment of death, and nothing beyond that. Hence their endeavour to penetrate into life in order to share in the knowledge of men. I frequently have a feeling that they are standing directly behind us, waiting to hear what answer we will give them, and what answer to destiny.

Psychiatrist, Dr Carl Wickland's records from his thirty years of clinical experience and organised psychical research at the Chicago psychiatric hospital is a scientific contribution supporting the theory of a non-corporeal existence. With the documented evidence provided by earlier mystics and scientists, such as Emmanuel Swedenborg, Allan Kardec, Edgar Cayce, William James, Frederic Myers and Professor James Hyslop, Dr Wickland's reports support the hypothesis of spirit attachment and possession as a reality that modern medicine should take much more seriously than it does at present.

No method of treatment, rehabilitation, therapy or medical intervention of any kind will succeed if the inner and outer etheric body of a patient has not been cleaned of attached spirits first.

Modern pioneers in spirit release methods, including William Baldwin, Irene Hickman, Shakuntala Modi and surgeon Charles Tramont have been teaching their colleagues how to release spirits from their patients. Now, in London, trained in the Hickman method and a personal friend and colleague of Dr Charles Tramont will teach a course comprising of three weekend modules on hypnotic spirit release therapy.

During this CPD event you will learn to assess whether spirit release therapy is appropriate for your client and their presenting condition. You will learn, through practical experience, spirit release techniques to facilitate the release of:

- Attached earthbound spirits,
- Dark force entities.
- Curses.
- Hexes.
- Alien implants.
- Negative self-created thought forms.
- Dissociated sub-personalities.

This course is for hypnotherapists interested in learning how to treat patients with recurring symptoms that fail to respond to traditional hypnotic approaches.

Contents of the course:

- Assessing clients
- Indications and contraindications
- Investigation techniques for revealing attached intruders
- Techniques for the release of earthbound spirits and the expulsion of dark force entities

- The safe management of protection and vulnerability.
- Means of ensuring that the client is able to integrate new knowledge

This course is purely practical and experiential. Therefore, there will be no time-consuming theoretical content. As an aid to study, notes will be provided as a framework for the course and all participants will be expected to read the recommended texts that provide the theoretical and scientific frameworks for the practical exercises to be learned.

About Dr Terence Palmer

Dr Terence Palmer is an independent psychologist located in South East Kent, UK. He has a degree in psychology from Canterbury Christ Church University, a Master's degree in the study of mysticism and religious experience from The University of Kent and a Doctorate in the scientific study of spirit possession from The University of Wales, Bangor.
